

GROUPE ROSSIGNOL Experiences 95% YoY Increase In Retailer Revenue With Distributed Order Fulfillment

Group Rossignol turned an e-commerce strategy into a simple, omni-channel landscape by connecting their retailer network with online order fulfillment to improve the consumer shopping experience.

Rossignol replaced a tedious and slow order management integration with an easy-to-use, easy-to-scale Magento plugin, making catalog and brand management effortless and allowing them to engage their dealer network by including them in online sales.

Prior to deploying the Quivers solution, Group Rossignol sold online without the ability to preserve the brand integrity of the 100-year-old business. Their previous e-commerce solution did not give them any control of the shopping environment or branding. Additionally, any changes Rossignol wanted to make to their catalog had to be communicated to the software maker's customer service team to make the change, slowing Rossignol down considerably.

Rossignol wanted to take back control of their website and their shopping environment. They also wanted to support their retail partners as part of the process of selling online.

THE CHALLENGE

Rossignol needed to be able to maintain control of its brand and needed the ability to effectively and efficiently merchandise its online catalog. They were lacking this ability in their previous e-commerce solution.

Part of their efforts to establish control over their shopping environment was the ability to create and position unique environments for targeted audiences. Rossignol needed to have environments for VIP customers, professionals and the general public.

Finally, Rossignol wanted a way to enable and support their retailer network. They wanted an effective way to engage with their dealers, and allow them to fulfill orders placed online with Rossignol.

We needed to find an e-commerce solution that would allow us to expand our online business quickly without losing control of our brands. The Quivers solution is the answer. In addition to brand control, the Quivers solution allows us to reduce the time and cost to promote and deliver our products through many more marketplaces.”

THE SOLUTION

Once the Quivers solution was live, Rossignol was able to manage a single master product catalog to create various online marketplaces, with each marketplace merchandised uniquely to appeal to a targeted audience, and fulfillment rules configured to enable retailer fulfillment.

With Quivers, Rossignol was provided the freedom to sell online to their VIP customers, professionals, and general consumers while controlling how their branding was reflected to customers, and who fulfilled the orders. A robust discount code engine and multi-price and currency capabilities were put in place.

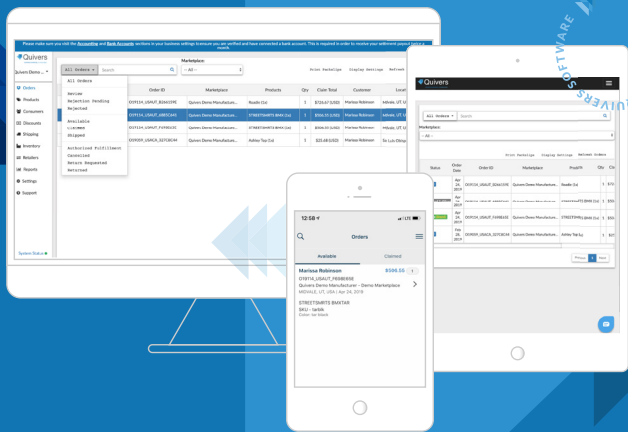

With the freedom to sell in new online marketplaces to unique customer segments, and the ability to choose their fulfillment strategy, Rossignol was able to take control of their brands, reduce the cost associated with selling products online, and provide better support to their dealers.
